Management Comments (29/06/18)

The protectionist offensive of the Trump administration and his commercial policies keep generating stress and uncertainty in the financial markets. Additionally, the instability of the German government coalition, threatening to hold advanced elections, does not help the situation, which has specially affected the depreciation of the euro. The behavior of equities has varied, according to which index we look at. European equities have accumulated negative results of -4% during the first semester, and the American equities, except the Nasdaq with returns of 10%, have had a very flat performance.

Macro data is still good. In the USA the PMI, ISM and employment indicators are pretty solid, above expectations and clearly expanding. In the euro zone, we have recuperated in June, with the GDP increasing over 0,5% as well as employment growth, which, together with pressure in prices, would backup the ECB in reducing incentives by the end of the year.

The fund has had positive returns of 0.64%. The contribution by pairs have been long positions of the Canadian dollar against American dollar and Swiss franc and long positions in pounds against the Australian and Canadian dollar. On the negative side, there have been long positions in pounds against American dollar and short euro positions against the New Zealand dollar. The volatility of the portfolio is steadily decreasing.
