Management Comments (06/28/19)

The behavior of the different currencies we trade keeps being affected, amongst other things, by the deceleration of global growth. This is being addressed by Central Banks with looser monetary policies. We have seen generalized interest rate cuts, being the RBA the last one to cut rates to the historical minimum of 1%.

With the month already ended, we knew about the commercial war truce between China and the US which involved the withdrawal of veto to Huawei.

The fund ends June with a performance of +1.4%.

During the month, the fund has profited from positions taken in May, where the model signaled new entry levels. The pairs that contributed more negatively to performance were AUD vs JPY, USD and CAD and on the positive side we had NZD vs USD and JPY.
