Management Comments (30/11/18)

Open uncertainties in various fronts have become something common in the last few months and have affected the behavior of various financial assets. To mention something different from those of previous months (commercial war, Brexit, Italy), we should highlight the lower crude oil prices. Brent has fallen close to 22%, something not seen since the collapse of the Lehman Brothers, which could increase fears of a major economic slowdown. Likewise, negative news regarding European Union rejection of the Italian budget resulted in the lowest exchange rate this year of the euro-dollar and generalized depreciation of the euro against other currencies in the program. The fund closed November with a positive return of +1.3, with an accumulated total of +6.7 so far this year. The main contributors this month have come from long positions of Australian and New Zealand dollar against the American dollar, long positions of Swiss franc against American dollar and Japanese yen, short positions of the euro against Canadian dollar and long positions of the pound against the Canadian and American dollar. The negative contributors have been long positions of New Zealand dollar against the Swiss franc.
